

Approaching Marina Lanzarote

Approach

Marina Lanzarote is in Arrecife within the Puerto Naos harbour, situated along the inner length of the south-east facing harbour breakwater and just south-west of the commercial port, Puerto los Mármoles. Around this area it is advisable to maintain a 0.5-mile distance from the shore to avoid the reef.

Arriving from the north the first landmarks will be the brightly lit power station and DISA Gas towers (and the height of the multi-storey Gran Hotel to the south). Recently extended another 433m, the Puerto de los Mármoles breakwater is marked by a new green and white tower (see left), the coordinates and light characteristics of which are 28 57.647 N 13 13.827 W and Fl.G.5s20m15M. An east cardinal mark stands on the NE extremity of the breakwater (28 57.851 N 13 31.689 W) with characteristics: VQ(3)W5s13m5M.

Arriving from the south the tall Gran Hotel building will be visible from at least 3M. Passing the airport on the port side, stay clear of the special marks which correspond to a tanker discharge point.

The old Puerto de Arrecife will come into view and has a south cardinal mark (Q(6)Fl.15s.10m5M) marking the end of the breakwater. An east cardinal mark (Q(3)10s) identifies the outer edge of the reef and then the port is clearly visible. Upon reaching the Puerto Naos breakwater the new cruise-liner terminal can be clearly seen at the easterly end of the Puerto Naos harbour wall and is marked at the SW point with red cylindrical tower mark (Fl.R.5s6m3M) and at its NE point with another red cylindrical tower, flashing Fl.(2)R.7s6m3M.

Once round the breakwater, make for the preferred channel mark (red & green post) on the very end of the container wharf Fl. (2+1)R.10s3M and then with the land-based fort (Castillo San José - see left) directly in front, turn to port using the marked channel. The travel-hoist and masts in the marina should be visible at this point.

Channel pillar buoys

Following the channel into the harbour, the successive two buoys flash: Fl(4)R.11s. and Fl.G.5s. The marina will now be clear with buildings and pontoons clearly visible to port. The fishing dock on the land side of the harbour is marked with green cylindrical tower with light sequence Fl(3)G.9s.9m.1M (see right).

Please ensure that you stay within the marked channel. (Now dredged to minimum 4.3m). Visitor arrival berths are currently positioned on the hammerheads of pontoons K, J and I.

A current listing of navigational aids for Arrecife can be found on the Spanish Navy website (select chart nº 6010: Puertos de Arrecife, Naos y Los Mármoles)
