

PACIFIC CROSSING GUIDE - 4TH EDITION, 2024

Weblink Supplement

Books are wonderful things. They do add weight to your vessel, admittedly, but they are easy to handle, don't depend on electricity and, I hope, look good on your bookshelf.

These days, however, there is much more information on the internet than could ever be summarized in a book. So it makes sense to provide links to further reading and helpful sites, which we do throughout the Pacific Crossing Guide - more than 800 links altogether.

But you can't just click on the links in a physical book. And some of those links will inevitably change or die over time. The purpose of this Supplement, therefore, is to provide you with links you can click, and to keep the links as up to date as possible. We will re-issue the Supplement periodically with current updates.

Some readers may print out the Supplement in order to have the most current links in hard copy. If a web address is short, then it is easy enough just to type it into a browser. Some of the web addresses cited in the Guide, however, are impossibly long or are hard to type because they have strings of numbers. So for a selection of links, we are providing QR codes as an experiment. The criterion for QR codes is primarily the length or complexity of a link, and secondarily its importance; most of them, therefore, are in Part Two. If the codes prove popular, we will expand the number.

The Supplement also provides an opportunity to add new information to the Guide, to update information that becomes out of date and generally to make improvements. So please send us any input you might have. The email address is:
